FOX CHAPEL CONNECTION

VOL. 2 • ISSUE 3

SUMMER 2021

Dear Neighbors,

FOX CHAPEL CONNECTS: After a year of social distancing, our neighborhood had a fun gathering at the cul de sac on April 29th. With over 30 in attendance, we got to meet new neighbors, catch up on news, and be amazed how children had grown in the past 13 months. In appreciation for our patience and understanding for a little loud music, J.R. Crickets provided ample wings and fries for the entire evening.

Atlanta's CDC had given the all-clear for us to be together maskless outside, and the weather was perfect, ending with a very colorful sunset. It felt good... It felt fine. Let's do it again soon.

Neighborhood Spotlight

John Handy, 1873

Right as our street does its hairpin turn is the home of a dedicated teacher, accomplished academic, and student of jazz.

John Handy takes pride in his family's roots in America's Historic Black Colleges and Universities and - like a number in his family, many of whom are preachers and teachers - he's a great talker. His story of how he came to the area is compelling.

John's father, also John, was born in Harrisburg, PA, and studied Religion and Psychology at Shaw University, a HBCU in Raleigh, NC, amassing a total of four degrees at various institutions. His career path, however, was as an Army chaplain and colonel. After retiring from the army, he became Vice President and Provost at Hampton University in Hampton, VA. In World War II in Marseilles, France, he met Bertha Reed, of Atlanta, GA, working with the U.S. Red Cross and they married.

Bertha was one of six children. Her father, Thomas, left farming during the Great Depression and learned the construction trade. He constructed the original slate roofs on buildings which included Sisters Chapel and Rockefeller Hall at the all-women's Spelman College in Atlanta, and Hope Hall and Merrill Hall at Morehouse College. Later, Bertha and her two sisters, Kathleen and Billie, were awarded scholarships and graduated from Spelman.

John was born in Pittsburgh, but at age four moved with his mother to The Bronx where his Aunt Grace was living. John attended Evander Childs High School playing baseball and running track, participating in the Junior Olympics, and winning in 400 meters. He graduated from Hunter College, a city college, with a degree in Economics and Math, and then headed to Columbia University, where he completed his M.A. in Economics. He then taught two years at Howard University in Washington, DC.

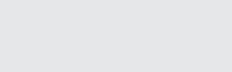

John headed to Atlanta to teach Economics at Clark College, later Clark Atlanta University, and has taught at Georgia State (where he completed his Ph.D.), Mercer Atlanta, Southern Tech and finally at Morehouse where he taught for twenty-six years, fifteen of which chairing the department.

In retirement, John follows his passions - politics, public health and economic welfare, tax policy, and "what is necessary to improve the lives of the American people... that's what economics should be about!" He reads on the history of economic thought and writes, attending and presenting at various conferences.
